Allison Williams received her bachelor's degree in biology and English from Duke University, and studied at Oxford University and an ethnobiology field school in Costa Rica. She worked as a writer and editor in New York City for eight years, including staff positions at Metro daily newspaper and Time Out New York. When the lure of the Northwest became impossible to ignore, she relocated to Seattle and has since realized two lifelong dreams: summiting Mount Rainier and poking sticks into the campfire without being yelled at. Allison earned her MFA in creative writing at the University of Alaska Anchorage, where her fiction thesis won the Jason Wenger Award for Literary Excellence. Her journalistic work has been recognized with awards from the Society of Professional Journalists and a nomination from the City and Regional Magazine Association. As senior editor at Seattle Met magazine, she covers travel and the outdoors by hiking every trail and driving every road she can find on a map.

MOON SEATTLE is a great book about the Seattle area. It discusses all you need to know about recreation, dining, nightlife, shopping, sightseeing, lodging, day trips, and neighborhoods in and around Seattle. There's also a section about religion in the area, as well as plenty of info for GLBTIQ travelers. Overall, MOON SEATTLE is great for both the relocater and the tourist, as well as people interested in different areas of North America.

All the best local spots!
