Nancy Yoshida is an Occupational Therapist by training and a sled dog enthusiast. She lives on a 33 acre "hobby farm" in North Dakota with her husband, several cats and a number of Alaskan Huskies. Nancy ran the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race in 2009. NIGEL'S CHOICE tells the story of this Iditarod adventure.

Nigel's Choice is a great story for all ages. It is well-written, engaging, and descriptive. The author does a great job of sharing her unique experience in running the Iditarod from a dog's perspective (Nigel's perspective). This is a must read for anyone who likes to read about dogs or about dog sledding, especially anyone interested in the great Iditarod race. Once I began the story, I could not put it down. It kept my interest and after each chapter I wanted to know what happened next so kept reading!

This book was very enjoyable and an easy, interesting read for kids of all ages. I followed Nancy through her Iditarod adventure and I learned the real story through Nigel. Nancy was so much more brave than I could ever be. This story has a great message about how your choices can affect so many others and is such a great lesson for all of us! Thank you Nancy, for having the insight to put a positive spin on an unfortunate event.

This book is a must read for any dog enthusiast. The story told from the voice of one of the sled dogs, relates the author's adventure running the 2009 Iditarod Dog Sled Race. The illustrations add to the story with its touching artwork done by Jon Van Zyle, the official Iditarod artist since 1979. The story is moving and is an easy read, one that you would not want to put down till the very end of the tale. I highly recommend this book for people of all ages.

This story, great for kids, tells of Nancy and her dog Nigel's race and how Nigel makes a decision that affects Nancy, his team and himself. A fun read that teaches us to think about our actions, the book is just the right length for young readers and wonderfully illustrated by Jon Van Zyle.
